3. GROUND TRAINING: A lecture was held on the results of further ground tests of the modified ejection seat. Films were also shown. All tests were made with the canopy closed and chilled. One test was made with the canopy unlatched on one side only. The result was a disastrously convincing failure. The "pilot" was arrested quite suddenly wearing a canopy rail for a necklace.

The IFR ground training was completed by both pilots and they would now be prepared at short notice for in flight training. This would consist of three flights, one of these at night, and would include a series of dry hook-ups followed by a refuelling. However, more or less flights might be required according to the proficiency and confidence of the individual pilot.
